Rainbow Project

providing recipes to distribute.
Last week the volunteer members of the Nutri Santé Committee prepared ingredient jars that were distributed in the schools for the children to decorate as gifts for their parents for Christmas. The jars contained all of the ingredients needed to prepare a special treat.

The Nutri Santé visit to the two local elementary schools in Mansonville also provided the students with a wonderful surprise. As part of an initiative to encourage children through the Covid Pandemic and using the "rainbow theme," the group distributed multicolored aprons and chef hats to every student in both schools. The delight on the faces of the children warmed all hearts in the room and the pride with which they wore the bright beautiful colors paid tribute to the better days to come and the promise of the rainbow.

"It was a wonderful experience at both of the schools," said Danielle Cousineau, CABMN board member and Nutri Santé committee member. "The children were so excited as were we, the members of the committee as we handed them their apron and hat. This gift and the recipe jars to bring home were perfect touches to share in the holiday spirit," she added.

One mother called the CABMN to state that her son came home wearing his apron and chef hat and for the first time ever, rather than throwing them like his clothing on the floor once removed, he actually placed them hanging in his room where he could see them and assure their safekeeping.

"The Nutri Santé committee is made up of some wonderful people who keep the health and well-being of the children at the forefront of their volunteer efforts," said Cousineau. "As volunteers we do things that make our own heart feel good and I cannot think of a better way to feel joy than how we feel when working with Potton's youth."

The Nutri Santé Rainbow project initiative was made possible through funding from the Municipality of Potton. For more information about this program or other programs of the CABMN visit: www.cabmn.org

No solution for women seeking maiden and married names on vaccine docs

QCNA news service

No solution is in sight for Quebec women who are trying to alter their vaccination proofs to reflect both their maiden and married names, writes The 1019 Report. The women could face issues during international travel because their Quebec vaccination documents feature their maiden names, but federal government passports show their married names. The Canadian government has said the names on both documents should correspond, and that those with inconsistent papers may face travel delays, forced quarantine time, and even be barred from flights. Federal and provincial government agencies have shirked responsibility for a fix. Some readers of The 1019 Report have come forward with a potential fix by calling the Services Quebec hotline, which has then added their married names to their vaccination proofs. However, it appears the approach is hit and miss, as the Health Ministry insists it is not possible to modify vaccination documents through the hotline.
